Do Not Hesitate

To bring up small repair jobs because you may think that we would not care to be bothered with them.

Why we've none hundreds of five cent jobs—and glad to get them to do, too.

Glad to have the opportunity to be useful to our customers.

We fix a broken brooch as willingly as restoring the wrecked internal economy of an expensive watch.

We are here to serve the public, and we ask the public to bother us all they like.

"Jack" Oorbett and "Kelly" Welch have gone. They left yesterday for Grand Island where they will help that city's ball team to pull out first place in this season's ball games. Columbus boys ball enthusiasts tried hard to raise money enough to keep the boys here but their attempts fell short by a small margin. Oorbett and Welch are not only ball players but they are clean ball players and gentlemen, the kind of fellows who dignify the game where they play. Jim Corbett will run Jack's business until the close of the ball season when Jack will return.

Because O. A. Fian, a tenant farmer of St. Paul, Nebraska, failed to get his corn husked in the fall he left St. Mary's Hospital of this city a corpse, last Sunday. He died from the effects of a gun shot wound in his leg just above the knee and his slayer was Jim Nichols the tenant who succeeded him on the farm. The shooting occurred about two weeks ago and Fish was brought here last Thursday night. He was practically dying from infection when he reached here and nothing could be done for him. The story of the shooting is brief. Fish was to vacate the farm in March for Nichols. He moved away but left some personal property including some unhusked corn in the field. He returned with his wife and started to husk it. Nichols went with a gun and ordered him off the premises. An altercation followed in which Fish was shot.

Gas for Columbus.

"An ordinance granting to George A. Scott, C. J. Garlow and O. T. Roen, their heirs and assigns, the right to manufacture and sell gas for power, fuel and light and such other purposes to which it may be properly applied—to construct gas works, buildings, tanks, reservoirs and machinery, to lay pipes on and along streets and alleys and public grounds and to build man-holes on the pipe-lines; to fix rates for the use of gas for all purposes to which it may be applicable."

This is the title of an ordinance which passed its second reading at the council meeting last Friday night and which promises gas for Columbus, if it passes, to be furnished by a company composed of local business men who can be depended upon to make the enterprise a success.

The maximum rate for gas fixed in the ordinance is $1.50 per thousand cubic feet, and extensions are to be built whenever the income from said extensions guarantee an income of 4 per cent on the investment. The ordinance provides for the commencement of the plant within 90 days, and the promoters declare that they have provided every safe-guard for the public interest. If the ordinance passes, a company will be incorporated and local investors will be given an opportunity to buy stock.

C. J. Garlow, one of the promoters of the enterprise, said to a Journal representative: "Gas for fuel and light under our plan will save Columbus citizens many dollars and we propose to push it as fast as possible."

The council had other business also, which kept them in session till one o'clock.

An ordinance for the Sunday closing of barber shops passed a second reading.

A new smoke stack was ordered for the water works.

A saloon license was granted to David Methaney.

Delegates from the five district councils of the Knights of Columbus met in state convention in this city yesterday to elect officers and attend to the regular business of the supreme council. Smythe of Omaha was elected Supreme Knight for the ensuing year. The state councils were represented by delegations as follows: Alliance: L. E. Dunn, A. P. McGuire, O'Neil; Arthur Mullen, E. H. Whelan. Omaha: William P. McDevitt, T. J. Mahoney, J. H. Schmidt, Tom Swift. Lincoln: John A. McGuire, J. H. Sherlock. Columbus: Frank Gerhart, Mark Burk. INTEREST INCREASING.

Great Crowds Attending the Lyon Meetings.

The big tabernacle was the scene on Sunday of three remarkable meetings, the like of which was never seen before in our city. The address on The Great Fight brought out in the afternoon a large audience of men. For an hour Mr. Lyon spoke on the battle every man has to wage against his own lower nature. It is one of the most scathing indictments of the vices and sins of our day, but was presented with a spirit of kindness as well as intense earnestness. Frequently the crowd broke forth in applause, and at the close it was a most thrilling sight to see the entire audience spring to their feet in token of their purpose to stand for a better life. The solo by Mr. Patterson, "Tell Mother I'll Be There," was also well received. The evangelist stated that he had but started upon his theme and would continue the address next Sunday at the same hour.

At the morning service Mr. Lyon gave a most able and scholarly address on the Lordship of Jesus as the basis for a great spiritual awakening. He has recently written a book upon this subject which has already gone into the third edition. The central truth of the sermon was that many have professed to receive Christ as their Savior from the guilt of sin that have never acknowledged Him as the Lord and Master of their entire lives. The speaker then proceeded to apply this great principle to modern domestic, educational, social, commercial and political life.

In the evening the great building was filled to the doors. Many had driven in from the surrounding country and neighboring towns. A chorus of more than a hundred voices led by Mr. Patterson filled the platform. The volume of song could be heard for many blocks. The favorite pieces seem to be "Just Lean on the Arms of Jesus" and the famous Glory song. The solo, "Would you Believe" was also very effective. Mr. Lyon spoke on "The Great Election." He pictured the choice between Jesus and Barabbas. It is a choice everyone must make. At the close many men and women came forward in response to the invitation to those who would accept Christ as their personal Savior and Master.

In the after meetings there is nothing that could be termed excitement, but the most thoughtful and serious spirit prevails. In a few words the evangelist explains what it is to be a Christian and the steps into the christian life. During the season of prayer each one is urged to call personally upon God for help and pardon, and to make a definite surrender to Christ. Those who make confession of their purpose to begin the christian life are given the blue button which Mr. Lyon uses in his work, a badge with the emblems of the cross and crown signifying Christ as both Savior and King. These buttons are becoming much in evidence on the streets.

The meetings will continue every evening except Saturday. On Thursday afternoon Evangelist Lyon will speak to women only. And on Friday night there will be a special talk on the "Deadline in Amusements."

All of these orders regularly are and are said to be in a prosperous condition. To this general subject pertains also the press and postoffice for they are instruments as criteria of the intelligence and enterprise of a people. The first paper published in the county was the Columbus Golden Age, by C. C. Strawn, editor and proprietor, commencing June 31, 1866, and ending with its twelfth number. It did not so much of starvation as of mortgage. Next came the Platte Valley Journal, by O. T. B. Williams. It was maintained one year, and was followed by the Columbus Journal, by M. K. Turner & Co., whose first number bears date May 1870. In the month of February 1874, dawned on our field under the proprietary and editorial management of W. N. Hensley, the Columbus Era. In May 1875 the Columbus Republican sailed out on the sea of News under the Captaincy of Frank P. Burgess.

The Journal and republican are in politics republicans; the Era democratic. The combined circulation of these three dailies papers is given us at about 2,000, and the aggregate value of their advertising and job work at about $6,000.

I have no postoffice statistics except from the Columbus office.

In 1869-70, daily papers 20. Weekly papers 100. Letters mailed, daily average 135. Income of office per year, $250. Stamps used per quarter.

In 1876, daily papers 90, weekly papers 90, weekly papers 100. Letters mailed daily, average 1,200. Income of office per year, $1,200.

From August 2, 1870 to July 3, 1876 there have been issued of money orders, 7,971. Stamps used per quarter, 15,000, stamped envelopes, several thousand and postal cards 3 to 6 thousand.

The Military History of Platte County.
There is another department of our history which we will dignify with the title of Military. For we have our little "war and rumors of war."

The memorable words of Logan the eloquent chief know, O white man, that there is enmity between me and thee, have been the standing motto of all Red men.

The Pawnees were never at any time, the avowed and open enemy of the white man of Nebraska. But in the early days when they were strong and we were weak, they begged and stole, insulted and threatened, until their insolence became insufferable, and the governor of the territory called upon the Militia to chastise them. Platte county furnished more than 50 of the little army of 300 that pursued the fugitive tribe and overtook them at a creek afterwards called Battle Creek, in memory of the event. Without a battle however, the Reds succumbed, and were permitted, on promise of good behavior, to return to their home below Fremont. This "Pawnee war" occurred in July 1857.

A number of little parties occurred during the next few years after the tribe occupied their new quarters on the Loup. Such was that, for illustration, when Quinn, six miles below Columbus shot an Indian dead whom he caught the third time after warning him, in the act of stealing grain. The Reds rushed down from Genoa in large numbers, armed to the teeth, and demanded the slayer. But Columbus and the big road rushed down too, armed in like manner and refused to deliver Quinn. The matter was finally adjusted by the sacrifice to Pawnee Justice of a penny and six sacks of flour.

A similar affair occurred at Barnum's. Not Barnum himself but someone in his employ. When the avengers came, Barnum was not immediately at hand, and the terrified family and neighbors, present only in small numbers, were about delivering over not the slayer but a whole cart load of flour and goods, when suddenly Barnum appeared on the scene and with thunderbolts of rage from his lips and a club in his hands drove the Reds from his premises.

The First National Bank

By degrees the Pawnees came to realize the situation, and as early as 1862 one brave white woman would drive a dozen Pawnee men from her with only a whip.

But in 1864 a new foe threatened us from the unknown abodes of the Sioux in the north and west. A story of terror properly goes before my account but must be omitted. The horrors of the west and south, some of them as near to us as Kearney and the Blue had for weeks filled our valley with painful apprehensions. But not until the "Looking Glass Meadow Massacre" had we realized the possibilities of our situation. Then pillage, wounds and death opened our eyes. Pat Murray had a hay making camp on the Looking Glass near Genoa. Mrs. Murray accompanied her husband and they tented on the meadow. One evening when Pat was absent at his farm, at the sunset hour, there rode down from the hills a squad of 25 Sioux into the camp. They entered peacefully and asked for food and Mrs. Murray supplied them. This done, they began to untie the team from their fastenings. The men resisting, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, their deadly weapons were in play. An old man was instantly brained and scalped. Adam Smith, Murray's brother-in-law, fell pierced with eight arrows; others in like manner yielded to the fatal poisoned arrows. Mrs. Murray with her knife in hand defending the property received the barbed arrows but not in any vital organ. Only one escaped a boy who hid beneath a pile of hay. The report of the distress being heard at a distant farm, parties came in the darkness and carried away the dead and dying. Mrs. Murray had crawled away a distance into the tall damp grass and spent the lonely night in agony of pain and horror. She yet lives and is here today, but she will never fully recover from the shock of that hour or the poison of those arrows.
